THE CONRADS NOT THERE.

Marshal from Corydon Goes to Serve His Warrants and Finds the Birds Flown.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. CORYDON, Ind., Aug. 9.-Town Marshal James Hudson, armed with warrants for Sam and Bill Conrad, went to Boone township to-day to serve them, accompanied by your correspondent. They arrived at the scene of Saturday night's bloody tragedy about 1 o'clock this afternoon. The cabin of the Conrads is situated between two high hills, and is about a quarter of a mile from any public highway. It is very difficult to get to the place in a buggy, and so the marshal and those with him went on foot, following a path which wound its way around the hills through a network of underbrash to the cabin. They found the house deserted, and the only living things on the premises were some chickens and an old horse, which was tied in the stable and looked like it was by the marshal. Everything in the house was apparently just as it was left last Sat-urday night. The doors were still down, and the rails used to batter them down lay where they had fallen. The beds and other house hold goods were scattered about over the floor. It is almost certain that the Conrads haven't been at home, but have been in Kentucky with their mother and sister every since Sunday afternoon.

The truth is that no one in Boone township has had the courage to venture down to the little cabin under the hills to find out whether or not they were at home. The report that the Conrade had threatened the lives of four others seems to be groundless. Tom Crozier is another one against whom it is said they had made threats. Mr. Crozier was seen by the reporter and admitted that he was very badly frightened. He carries his shotgun all the time and will not leave sight of his house. The others are also badly scared and go heavily armed. The Conrads are believed to be in Mead county, Kentucky, with relatives, and the people of Boone township are in a high state of excitement and fear. Marshal Hudson did not call on any one to go with him to make the arrest, and it is not likely they would have gone if he had.

The Conrade Interviewed.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 9 .- The first anthentic statement from William and Samuel Conrad concerning the Mosquito-creek bottom tragedy was secured indirectly today by a Courier-Journal reporter. The most sensational part of their statement is that they believe many more men were wounded than were killed. The Conrads while they were on the Kentucky side of the river stopped at the home of Thomas Morris, near Muldraugh. They were also in the little village part of Sunday and Monday, and J. G. Harrington held a long conversation with them. When the two brothers appeared at Muldraugh they had no gone. William carried a large revolver in each of his tronsers pockets, while Sam had two in his blouse. They were looking for the way to Magistrate Jerry Watt's house to advise with him as to the best thing for them to do. During the day they found the magistrate, who told them they had better get out of the country, since there had as yet been no writ sworn out against them, and a return to the old home would probably mean more bloodshed. Mr. Harrington saw them again after their return, sitting in the shade of a large tree. William Conrad told him the following story of the raid and its results, prefacing it with declaring that they had nothing to do with their father's death, which was as great a mystery to them as to any one else: "Rumore in the neighborhood had caused me and Sam to believe that we were to be made the victims of the White Caps," said William, "When we awoke one morning and found our dogs poisoned, we, of course, knew that an attack would soon be made and began sleeping in the corn patch near the house. About 2 o'clock Sunday morning we heard a noise up the side of the hill. We had not been asleep during the night. In a few minutes about forty men walked through the garden path about fifteen feet from where we lay. They went into the yard, but we decided not to shoot until we could see what they intended to do. One of the men went to the rail fence, picked up a rail and they battered in the door. Mother and sister were dragged from the house and a rope was placed about my sister's neck. We raised up in the corn and would have fired by for force of the door. have fired, but for fear of shooting mother and sister. Finally some of the men went on the porch and one of them carried a lamp. Two were standing between us and the light so I thought this would be a good place to shoot. I cocked both barrels, which were heavily loaded, and pulled one trigger. The light went ont and the three men fell. "Soon as they saw the flash from my gun they fired in our direction, but Sam and I moved down the fence without waiting to be told. Their bullets whizzed close to us other barrels into the crowd, and I am sure more men were wounded than were killed. I don't see how each shot could have failed to hit less then five or six men. They fired several times at us, but, as we slipped from place to place each time after firing, they missed us every time. Before the shooting was over they carried mother to the cistern and threatened to throw her in. We could have picked off those men, but were atraid of hitting her. Sam killed the man who carried the rope. We did not shoot any more, but ran up the side of the hill, and the regulators skipped out in the other direction. "When we felt sure that all were gone we went back to the house and at day break took a look at the five dead men. I knew the faces, but had never in my life spoken a word to any of them. I told mother to what had happened, and have some one to come after the bodies. Two of them were on the porch, but the other three had crawled a short diswithout being hort, but did not want to do so. In fact, after emptying our guns, we were both scared, and ran away. Sunday afternoon we were rowed across the river, having spent the morning in the woods. We sent mother and sister away, and they are here in Muldraugh."

The brothers were asked if they would surrender, the report having gone out that peace warrants would be issued for them. They said that if arrested and deprived of their arms the White Caps would be sure to mob them, and they were determined not to die so easily. If they had to die they would kill as many as they could. Therefore they declared that they would not surrender unless allowed to keep their weapons. Several persons advised them not to return to Indiana, as they would be sure to get into trouble again. "But I was born there; it's my hone, and, by God. I'm goin' to live there," said Sam Conrad. They said were they to leave While there are only thirty acres in the farm, it has always provided them with a living, and the crops have not yet been harvested. They also spoke of their live stock, which they do not wish to lose. They went back to Indiana Monday afternoon, but were again at Muldraugh Tuesday morning, but are now believed to be back in Indiana, where an officer is trying to find them to serve peace warrants. The pistols which the Conrads carried are believed to have been taken from the bodies of the dead White Caps. When the dead men were found by their relations they were unarmed. This was regarded as a remarkable circumstance, would attack men like the Conrads were known to be without having weapons.

WHAT DEES THINKS.

Believes the Men Should Not Accept a Cut in Wages-The Vandalla Idea. TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 9 .- Eugene Debs, who was the chief organizer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, says the railway companies are not warranted in asking their employes to accept a reduction of 10 per cent. in wages. He referred particularly to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and to the Mackey system, which did a better business in July than in the same month last year. He believes that an attempt is being made to take advantage of the hard times to reduce the standard of wages, not so much for the saving for a few months, as pretended, but with the knowledge that it would take several years' effort on the part of the men to have the standard restored. Said he:

"When any company has passed a divi-dend and caused the rich stockholder to feel the pinch, then it will be time to pinch the employes. If the companies had pursued a policy of voluntarily raising wages when they were raised in the past the men would be far more willing to heed the request for a reduction without questioning the assertion that it had become absolutely necessary.

It is understood that the Vandalia management do not contemplate a reduction in the rate of wages. During July retrenchment was effected in several departments. It is also understood that the working hours in the shops will be reduced from nine to eight, and perhaps, afterwards. there will be a reduction in working days from six to five. It is not believed the necessity will arise for a reduction in the rate of wages, but on the contrary that there will soon be a revival of business which will cause a resumption of work now suspended. The Vandalia idea seems to be that the men are earning the wages paid them, and that the scale is a fair and liberal one, which ought not to be changed unless conditions are considerably altered.

JAMES TURNER THE BERO.

He Descends Into a Well Filled with Bad Gas and Saves a Farmer's Life.

Special to the Indiapapolis Journal. GREENSBURG, Ind., Aug. 9. - Thomas Pool, a farmer, residing two miles west of this city, had a water well shot this afternoon by William Winchester, and after he left Pool went down in the well to make a survey. On coming to the top he became depressed with foul air and fell to bottom of the well. James Turner rushed to Pool's rescue and went down into the well to tie s rope around the farmer's body. Turner himself then became so much affected with the gas that It required the work of two other men to draw them from the well. Neither Pool nor Turner could speak when once out of the hole. Turner had several spasms, but both got better after a time, with the use of restoratives.

Sermon by Grand Chaplain Reed. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

MARTINSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 9 .- Elder Reed, Grand Chaplain of the G. A. R. of Indiana, delivered a sermon at the Christian Church Sunday night, using the text: "Render to Casar the things that are Casar's, and to God the things that are God's." The sermon throughout was full of patriotism and Christian loyalty. He paid a fitting trib-nte to the W. C. T. U. metto, "For God and Home and Native Land." He expressed little sympathy for opposers of service pensions, and for people who hide their money through the corn. Then we emptied the | to avoid paying taxes. Speaking of the National Encampment, be predicted the largest attendance ever had, and that it would surpass all other Indiana events.

An English Ale Plant at Gas City. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

GAS CITY, Ind., Aug. 9.-A syndicate of English capitalists has decided on Gas City for the location of a large brewery for the purpose of manufacturing English ale exclusively. The demand for this ale has so grown in this country within the last few years that Englishmen were shrewd enough to see that ale of the same quality as the imported article, if made here, must yield large returns. The plant is to be an extensive one, and will cover five acres of ground. Work on the buildings will be begun at once. The Morgan Brewing Company is the name of the concern, and it has unlimited capital be-Another Pensioner "Suspended." Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind.; Aug. 9 .- John A. Corbin, of this city, has had his pension suspended until he can produce further proof why he should be paid $12 per month. He was in Company G. Eleventh Indiana Volunteers, and the disabilities on which his pension was given were for anchylosis, diarrhæa, piles, catarrh and almost total deafness. He has been ordered before the examining board at Lafayette, which is an injustice to an old man, who could much easier have appeared before a similar board here in this city.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Aug. 9 .- What was advertised to be a ten-round glove contest for points resulted in a knock-out in the first round at Sans Souci Hall, on the South Side, here, to-night. Fred Anson met the "Fostoria Kid" and knocked him out by a blow in the short ribs just as time was called. The Kid was carried to his corner, and when time was called for the second round he threw up the sponge. The tight was a terrific one, and was witnessed by two hundred citizens.

Aged German Veteran Whose Upinion of Grover Cleveland Has Changed.

AN IDOL SMASHED.

From a conspicuous corner in the parlor of an humble lrvington home, there has been absent, since last Saturday, the elaborately framed portrait of Grover Cleveland. The master of the Irvington home is a staid old German ex-soldier and penstoner, who has at his tongue's end the story of many a thrilling battle. For years this loyal German veteran has been know among his neighbors as one of the very pillars of Marion county Democracy, and last March, when President Cleveland, with due pomp. assumed the head of the government and pension department his Irvington admirer. procuring the finest steel engraving to be found of the President, had it framed. An ordinary frame was untit for the loved portrait, thought the old fellow, and straightway he came to town and purchased an affair of gorgeous gilt and oxi-dized silver. Then Mr. Cleveland, surrounded by his massive adornment, was suspended in the most prominent corner of the parlor, idolized and worshiped by the deluded old Tenton. In sacred and undisturbed silence the face of the Democratic President looked down upon many a festive scene in the home, and until last Saturday afternoon was held as priceless by the master of the house.

For years the German veteran has been in the enjoyment of a comfortable pension paid him by the government for honorable service and each pension paying week has seen him among the first with his voucher. Last Saturday, as usual, he drove into the city and went at once to the pension office. After awhile his turn came and proudly throwing his voucher into the hands of the clerk he expectantly waited for the check. It came not, for the official with the polite regret which has now become so familiar with him, informed the waiting veteran that his name was no longer on the persion rolls. Dazed and dumb with indignation and disappointed hope the old fellow left the office, untied his staid old horse and drove back to his | Cheviot, Cassihome. Into the house he hurried, administering a silent snub to the wife of his bosom as he passed on the way to his parlor. For a moment he stood before the picture of his proud idol. He looked up into the great, stolld face of Grover with its voluptuous wealth of chine, and then with an exclamation of intense indignation reached for the frame of gilded grandeur. With a crash the frame, glass and face of the worshiped monarch came down and in five seconds, by the vigorous employment of a pair of stout boot heels, there was an idol smashed As he shoveled the particles of dislocated artinto a coal bucket the outraged German delivered himself thus in the presence of his good wife who, in open-eyed horror, had witnessed the scene:

"You Gott de poys for you, den I votes for you tree times. Now you cut off de penebun. You times. Now you cut off de penebun. You can now go to de devil. I'm done mit you."
The neighbors of the angry citizen are and $25, now $15 $12.50 slyly speculating on the extreme probability of new political colors being adopted in the old veteran's home.
